

d'Lish urban kitchen

As owner of d'Lish urban kitchen, Amanda Babichuk is a successful entrepreneur and an inspiring role model for young women. A single mother at 16, she connected with Terra and was class valedictorian of her Braemar School graduating class in 1997. With perseverance and infinite energy, Amanda then obtained her Bachelor of Commerce from the University of Alberta. She achieved her entrepreneurial dream when she opened d'Lish in November 2008. This meal assembly and catering business uses organic and locally sourced food. d'Lish promotes healthy eating for families with limited time and resources. Amanda is also the 2009 recipient of the YWCA Women of Distinction award in the entrepreneur category.

Amanda credits Terra for helping her with the challenges of teen parenting. "Terra gives young parents hope and a sense of community and support. Teen parents need to feel they are not cast aside by the community," says Amanda. Terra appreciates the support of d'Lish as a diaper drop off site during the Baby Heroes campaign!

This is another great example that small business owners who have big hearts can do meaningful things for their community.

About Baby Heroes:

The Terra Baby Heroes campaign works to engage the community through a three-week diaper drive, taking place from October 7 – 25th, 2009, to raise awareness about the importance of empowering teen parents to succeed.

WEM is the primary diaper drop-off location (Phase 1, near entrance 40), but donations can also be made at any one of our other drop-off locations around Edmonton, such as Bon Ton Bakery.
